foundations of the imperialist government'. But the difference with the Gandhian approach was clear from the outset in that immediately 'Gandhi's reaction was a bitter denunciation: "The bomb-throwers have discredited the cause of freedom"' and that 'Congressmen should not give, even in secret, any approval to the deed"'.[22] The 'mad worship' of Bhagat Singh had 'led to goondaism and degradation'.[23] Habib therefore refers to 'the Mahatma's unqualified hostility towards the revolutionaries'.[24]
