most bitterly freezing winters on record descended upon the protesters. By the opening months of 2021, there sprang up a Bhagat Singh Library at Dakha Singhu on Delhi's border with Haryana. With no less than an astonishing 3,500 books in Punjabi and Hindi, the ones which were most in demand were the writings and biographies of freedom fighters. Amongst the most cherished were those of Udham Singh, Kartar Singh Sarabha and Bhagat Singh.[20]

The dead clearly live among us. The past inhabits the present. We just need to look harder to see it. For now, we would do well to remember India's Ali Sardar Jafri: 'Ab bhi zindan-e-ghulami se nikal sakte hain, Apni taqdir ko hum aap badal sakte hain.' ('Even now we can cast aside our chains / Even now we can build our own destiny').

Will India do so?
