sanctions being employed by the courts against the jail authorities, this is a classic way in which the rule of law was habitually undermined.

161

With reference to his applications of 11th August, 1930, and 15th August, 1930, on the subject of interviews between himself and friends or relatives in the Jail let Bhagat Singh be supplied by the Registrar with a copy of the remarks made by the Tribunal on his application of 11th August, 1930. Let Bhagat Singh also be informed that if he wishes to further make any representation to the Tribunal in connection with the matter the Tribunal will be prepared to hear him personally or through counsel on the subject at Poonch House on 25th August, 1930, at 3 p.m.

22/8/30.

(15) Eventually, even the pretence of a trial in accordance with the dictates of the rule of law was no longer being maintained, and it stood as an apparition fully exposed, when on 25 August 1930 Mr Justice Hilton even dispensed with Bhagat Singh's presence in court. Nor of course was his lawyer present in court (Lahore Archives, previously unpublished).