(19) On 30 August 1930, the distinguished lawyer Amolak Ram Kapur openly penned the words to the special tribunal that ‘for some time the Jail authorities under orders from the government [Italics added by AU] had stopped interviews with the prisoners’ so that it was only a day before that the finance minister of Punjab (rather than an order from a court of law) ‘issued instructions to the Superintendent of the Central Jail and the Borstal institution authorising them to allow the prisoners to interview the two legal advisers . . .’. As per these instructions, both Bhagat Singh and B.K. Sinha were to be afforded ‘a joint interview’ now with their legal advisers. More importantly, ‘Bhagat Singh will have an opportunity of interviewing his father who has been sent for from Ludhiana’. In the meantime, ‘Bhagat Singh and the under-trial prisoners in the Borstal institution want a copy of the printed paper-book each, in order to understand the case against the individual accused which he may desire to meet . . .’ (Lahore Archives, previously unpublished).

(20) Less than a month before the sentence of death was pronounced on Bhagat Singh, there was an application on 22 September 1930 by Shiv