meñ, lazzat-e-sahra-navardi duri-e-manzil meñ hai / shauq se rah-e-mohabbat ki musibat jhel le, ik ?hushi ka raaz pinhañ jada-e-manzil meñ hai / aaj phir maqtal meñ qatil kah raha hai baar baar, aa.eñ vo shauq-e-shahadat jin ke jin ke dil meñ hai / marne vaalo aao ab gardan kaTao shauq se, ye g*hanimat vaqt hai* ?hanjar kaf-e-qatil meñ hai / mane-e-iz.har tum ko hai haya, ham ko adab, kuchh tumhare dil ke andar kuchh hamare dil meñ hai / mai-kada sunsan ?hum ulTe pa?e haiñ jaam chuur, sar-niguñ baiTha hai saaqi jo tiri mahfil meñ hai / vaqt aane de dikha deñge tujhe ai asmañ, ham abhi se kyuuñ bata.eñ kya hamare dil meñ hai /ab na agle valvale haiñ aur na vo armañ ki bhii?, sirf miT jaane ki ik hasrat dil-e-'bismil' meñ hai'.

2. The full translation of the poem in English is as follows: 'The desire for revolution is in our hearts, Let us see what strength there is in the arms of our executioner / Why do you remain silent thus?, Whoever I see, is gathered quiet so . . . / O martyr of country, of nation, I submit myself to thee, For yet even the enemy speaks of thy courage The desire for struggle is in our hearts . . . / When the time comes, we shall show thee, O heaven, For why should we tell thee now, what lurks in our hearts? / We have been dragged to service by the hope of blood, of vengeance, Yea, by our love for nation divine, we go to the streets of the enemy, The desire for struggle is in our hearts . . . / Armed does the enemy sit, ready to open fire, Ready too are we, our bosoms thrust out to him, With blood we shall play Holi, if our nation need us The desire for struggle is in our hearts . . . / No sword can sever hands that have the heat of battle within, No threat can bow heads that have risen so . . . / Yea, for in our insides has risen a flame, and the desire for struggle is in our hearts . . . / Set we out from our homes, our heads shrouded with cloth, Taking our lives in our hands, do we march so . . . / In our assembly of death, life is now but a guest, The desire for struggle is in our hearts . . . /Stands the enemy in the gallows thus, asking, "Does anyone wish to bear testimony?" . . . / With a host of storms in our heart, and with revolution in our breath, We shall knock the enemy cold, and no one shall stop us . . . / What is that body that does not have hot blood in it, How can a person conquer a Typhoon while sitting in a boat near the shore / The desire for struggle is in our hearts, We shall now see what strength there is in the boughs of the enemy.