Chapter 33

1. See Section 69 of the Government of India Act 1919.
2. There was a ‘Statement’ provided by Governor-General Irwin which accompanied the ordinance. It had five paragraphs, but none demonstrated an ‘emergency’ or the necessity to act for the ‘peace and good government’ of British India. All Irwin did was to give a narrative account of how ‘on the 11th July 1929 the enquiry in the proceedings known as the Lahore Conspiracy Case commenced before a Magistrate . . .’ and proceeded to state, ‘. . . The offence alleged against the accused are both in their own nature and in their relation to the public security of unusually serious character. They include the murder of Mr Saunders, Assistant Superintendent of Police, and head Constable Chanan Singh in Lahore, on the 17th December 1928, the establishment of bomb factories at Lahore and Saharanpur, the conspiracy leading to the throwing of two bombs in the Legislative Assembly on the 8th April 1929, and various other revolutionary activities. For the purpose of establishing these charges which were concerned with many different places and with events occurring over a considerable period of time, the prosecution considered it would be necessary to produce 600 witnesses.’
