work, headed 'When Jinnah defended Bhagat Singh' (at pp. 76–96) pays careful reading for the lengths that Jinnah went to in his defence of Bhagat Singh, even when their politics differed so widely from each other.

Chapter 34

1. But Section 65 of the 1915 act says: In the first place it does not take into consideration the other provisions of the Government of India Act, 1915, particularly the provision contained in sections 65 and 72. By section 65(1) of the Government of India Act, 1915, the Governor-General in Legislative Council was given power to make laws for all persons, for all courts, and for all places and things, within British India. By section 72 he was also given power for promulgating ordinances in cases of emergency. By the Charter Act of 1915 therefore the High Court possessed all the jurisdiction that it had at the commencement of the Act and could also exercise all such jurisdiction that would be conferred upon it from time to time by the Legislative power conferred by that Act.
