graduate. The reason was that, faced with family pressure to get married in the middle of 1923, Bhagat Singh fled to Kanpur and left Lahore. Over the next year, he worked for the Hindi journal, Pratap, using the name ‘Balwant’, and came under the influence of a journalist named Ganesh Shankar Vidyarthi, who was a staunch revolutionary. From now on, Bhagat Singh’s life would be steeped in the company of fellow revolutionaries, and they would come from all over India.
