> The real duty of the newspapers is to educate, to cleanse the minds of people, to save them from narrow sectarian divisiveness, and to eradicate communal feelings to promote the idea of common nationalism. Instead their main objective seems to be spreading ignorance, preaching and propagating sectarianism and chauvinism, communalism, people's minds leading to the destruction of our composite culture and shared heritage.[6]

Although it has been suppressed from national memories, either by design or by accident, for close to a century, the story of Bhagat Singh is suddenly now back in the public consciousness as never before, being evident in the media, popular culture and government announcements of both India and Pakistan. The question is, however, what the story should be and who has the right to tell it. To this we must now turn.
