mastermind of the Mumbai terror attack, Hafiz Saeed.[9] When plans to rename Shadman Chowk as 'Bhagat Singh Chowk' were aborted in 2012, Britain's Daily Mail reported that 'Shadman Chowk stands on the spot that marks the execution ground of the Lahore Central Jail . . .'.[10] This is not quite true. Shadman Chowk is strictly speaking part of the Shadman area and was indeed previously more accurately known as Fawara Chowk. This is located today in the area known as Government Officer Residence ('GOR'), on an old site where the 'Female Penitentiary' once existed, but where the Fatima Memorial Hospital today stands. It is about a kilometre's distance from where an old lunatic asylum stood, though it has now been replaced by the Institute of Mental Health. In front of the entire GOP area is an old watercourse some 70 m wide, which can be traversed by a bridge. That is where the vast complex of the Lahore Central Jail once stood, in an area of about a square kilometre, close to Shadman Gardens. This is where the Shadman Market is presently located, some 300 km from Fawara Chowk, more recently called Shadman Chowk. Thus, whereas Shadman Market is north of the water channel Shadman Chowk is to the south of it.
