. Ibid.
. Badauni, Muntakhab-ut-Tawarikh, trans. W.H. Lowe.
. Nizamuddin Ahmad, Tabakat-i Akbari.
. The Akbarnama of Abu'l Fazl, vol. 3. Evidently, Ibrahim's fellow Mirzas annoyed him with their harsh appraisal of his performance against Akbar: 'a discussion arose among the brothers about Ibrahim's defeat at Sarnal. From criticism they came to violent language, and from that to a quarrel. Ibrahim Husain [Mirza], who was skilful as a swordsman and distinguished for his want of sense, was displeased with his brothers and separated from them, and foolishly resolved to make an attack on the capital. His haughty brothers, from their evil destiny, were glad of the departure of such a brother and did not try to appease him.'
. Monserrate, The Commentary of Father Monserrate. Such was the wealth and renown of the ports of Gujarat that Ralph Fitch, an early English traveller to Akbar's court, came bearing a letter from Queen Elizabeth addressed to the 'King of Cambay'. See William Foster, ed., Early Travels in India: 1583–1619 (Low Price Publications, 1921).
. The Akbarnama of Abu'l Fazl, vol. 3.
. Ibid.
. Could it be that Gulrukh gave her daughter to Baglana in a bargain of her own? She would have trusted Akbar not to harm the girl; and the boy, her son, might yet grow up to stake a claim in his grandfather Kamran's name.
. The Akbarnama of Abu'l Fazl, vol. 3; the commander was Saif Khan, elder brother of one of Akbar's milk brothers, Zain Koka.
. Jahangir, The Jahangirnama: Memoirs of Jahangir, Emperor of India, ed. and trans. W.M. Thackston (Oxford University Press with the Smithsonian Institution, 1999).
. Abu'l Fazl, The History of Akbar, vol. 5, trans. W.M. Thackston (Murty Classical Library of India, Harvard University Press, 2019).
. Ibid.
. The Akbarnama of Abu'l Fazl, vol. 3.
. Chester Beatty / Wikimedia Commons: https://commons.wikimedia.org/wiki/File:Akbar_Fights_with_Raja_Man_Singh.jpg
. The Akbarnama of Abu'l Fazl, vol. 3.
. Badauni, Muntakhab-ut-Tawarikh, trans. W.H. Lowe.
. Abu'l Fazl, The History of Akbar, vol. 5, trans. W.M. Thackston.
. Victoria and Albert Museum: https://collections.vam.ac.uk/item/O9429/husain-quli-and-akbar-painting-basawan
. The other, a nonentity called Shah Mirza, was part of this alliance but plays no real role in the events that follow.
. The Akbarnama of Abu'l Fazl, vol. 3.
. Nizamuddin describes him riding in a cart, one night, being massaged to soothe the pain; for most of the journey, day and night, Akbar was in his saddle.
. The Akbarnama of Abu'l Fazl, vol. 3. Akbar was not angry because they were lost, but because his men had tried to dodge his orders. Akbar had wanted the imperial escort to take them via Sirohi. Only recently, however, a Mughal general – Mir Muhammad Khan, Aziz's uncle – was grievously injured by the Rajputs of Sirohi, one of whom stabbed him near his collarbone as Mir Muhammad offered them paan in friendly farewell. Akbar had reacted to Sirohi's resistance with punitive missions, and the area was quiet now. Still, his companions did not think it wise to risk a journey through it in such small numbers. They persuaded the escort to pretend he was going via Sirohi, while taking another route. The escort obliged, promptly lost his way and gave the whole game away.