Acknowledgements

I can only hope that what I've written of Akbar's life is worthwhile, but that I've written it at all owes entirely to two people: Chiki Sarkar and Nandini Mehta.

I am deeply grateful to Chiki for convincing me to embark on a project I would have been far too shy to attempt on my own. And I cannot quite express how wonderful it has been to have had Nandini by my side these past three years, with her perfect balance of enthusiasm and patience, encouraging me to write, allowing me to think – I could not have written this book without her.

Many thanks also to the people who worked on Akbar with me: Parth Mehrotra, Arani Sinha, Devangana Ojha, Shreya Chakravertty, Shyama Warner – for hand-holding, comma-culling and bettering this book in many ways – and to Gavin Morris for yet another beautiful cover.

Thank you to Priya Doraswamy, my agent.

I am grateful to BL*ink* of The Hindu Businessline for the use of two passages that I first wrote for the newspaper.

Thank you also to the French Institute in India and the Maison des Écrivains Étrangers et des Traducteurs in France for giving me two lovely months of leisure in Saint-Nazaire in which to finish the penultimate draft of this book.

Finally, and as always, I am hugely indebted to my family and my friends, some of whom have endured relentless conversation about Akbar these past years and all whom have long endured me.
