
Freer Gallery of Art, Washington, D.C. / Wikimedia Commons

Little Akbar recognizes his mother. Three-year-old Akbar had not seen Hamida for two years and Humayun arranged a game to see if he would recognize her. Even more charming than the toddler racing to his mother is the look of love that his parents exchange. Attributed to Madhava, c. 1596–1600.