

Akbar rides his musth elephant Hatesh across a pontoon bridge in Agra while his horrified subjects wonder if their padishah has lost his mind. Riding musth elephant was one of Akbar's passions and became one of his defining traits. He said he did it to gauge God's will. Attributed to Basawan and Chitr, c. 1590–95

Victoria and Albert Museum, London/Bridgeman Images