The murder of Adham Khan, son of Akbar's beloved Maham Anaga. Adham sanctioned the murder of Akbar's equally beloved foster father Shamsuddin (lying in a pool of blood at bottom left). Akbar's fury in the aftermath is often portrayed as the beginning of the end of the dominance of political affairs. Attributed to Miskin and Sanwlah, c. 1590–95.

Mughal troops hoping to blow their way into Chittorgarh were instead blown to bits when a stash of gunpowder exploded under their feet. Soldiers flew in the air like so many moths to that fatal flame, wrote Abul Fazl. Adding insult to injury, the troops of Chittorgarh, having suffered fewer casualties, mocked the Mughals from their bastions. Afterwards, the Mughal army ready to give up the siege but Akbar (bottom left) wouldn't budge. Attributed to Miskin and Dhava, c. 1590–95.
