Circumcision festivities for Akbar's three sons, with the newly built city of Fatehpur Sikri in the background. Women in Gingerbread Lucknow dress dance in celebration and gold is distributed to the poor. Attributed to Dharma Das, c. 1602–03.

Persian and Sanskrit scholars discuss the translation of the Mahabharata. Akbar was a bibliophile and his court a busy hive of translators, Nizamuddin amongst them. Attributed to Dharm, c. 1598–99.