rumours of a planned migrants' train were ignited by the police as many media sections reported?

While several migrants died on the journey home, the truth remains that lakhs of lives and mass deaths in rural India were averted due to the decision of not sending them home in the early days of the pandemic. In national interest, the government took on the attacks and didn't budge on their decision to start migrant movement from the cities until they were fully prepared.