Constitution? Where should the fine line between interference and accountability be drawn? Due to the arms of the government not functioning in cohesion, the media, specifically the international media, gets an opportunity to comment on the country's credibility. Is that an outcome desirable in the best interest of the nation? Perhaps this is a matter better suited for debate in the Indian Parliament but certainly warrants discussions, deliberations and deep engagements by experts on the matter.