Covisheild was the exact same formula which was used by them to inoculate their own citizens under AstraZeneca, they declared that they'd recognize Covishield but Indians would still need to quarantine since they didn't recognize CoWIN-issued digital certificates—a system manifold times more foolproof than their rickety cards issued in the name of vaccination records. The Indian government once again pushed back to diplomatically resolve this discriminatory policy. In fact, just a few days later, when the prime minister spoke at the Global COVID-19 Summit, he dealt with the matter head-on by stating that India was running the world's largest inoculation campaign and had recently vaccinated 25 million people in a single day and that this feat was achieved due to 'India's use of our innovative digital platform CoWIN'. He further expressed concern on the pandemic's economic impact, called for mutual recognition of COVID-19 vaccine certificates and urged countries to enable easier international travel.[5]

◆

1 SEPTEMBER 2021

INDIA | 3,96,207 ACTIVE CASES | 4,39,559 DEATHS | 67.10 CRORE VACCINE DOSES

WORLD | 1,89,40,415 ACTIVE CASES | 45,66,300 DEATHS | 317 CRORE VACCINE DOSES

India was geared up to vaccinate its entire, eligible adult population with both doses by the end of 2021. The systems put in place had ensured that the country could handle over a crore immunizations per day and had done so several times in the past month. Alongside, we came with the knowledge that all of the vaccine-manufacturing companies which we had painstakingly built over the last year were on the crux of delivering results. Zydus Cadila had already been granted emergency use authorization, becoming the fifth candidate to enter the market. Biological E and Genova Life Sciences were also on the verge of flooding the vaccine pool with their candidates. Soon, it would become a problem of plenty, where we would have more doses than our population. Oddly, Rahul Gandhi, Mamata Banerjee, Arvind Kejriwal and some other vocal opposition leaders went totally schtum on the subject of India's admirable vaccination drive. Mum.