archaeological record suggests that the Minoans overused the natural resources of the island and caused deforestation. It is generally understood that they were eventually defeated by the Mycenaeans. There also occurred a volcanic eruption at modern day Santorini (known in antiquity as Thera), somewhere between 1650 – 1550 BCE. The volcano resulted in a massive tsunami that caused the destruction of this great civilization. Some theorists suggest that this is what eventually provided the inspiration for Plato’s Atlantis.