The Ottoman Empire

While France, Germany, Great Britain, and the other countries had commenced fighting, the Ottoman Empire was dragged into the midst of battle because Germany had manipulated Russia into believing the Ottomans had launched attacks on them. Furthermore, Russia wanted to secure the Dardanelles, a waterway that was used by Russia. The waterway was located in the Gallipoli Peninsula within the Ottoman Empire. When Russia attacked the Ottoman Empire, France and Britain were forced to help its ally. France and Great Britain ultimately failed in their attacks on the Dardanelles and removed their armies from the region after several months.