The Normandy Invasion

In June 1944, the D-Day Invasion was launched by combined forces of the Americans and the British. They arrived in Normandy, which was controlled by Germany at the time. The invasion was successful and the German army was forced to withdraw from the western front. After one year, Germany was surrounded by the Allied Forces. In May 1945, Germany formally surrendered after Hitler committed suicide in Berlin with his mistress.