are developed based on his work and are much larger than what he originally made. In 1643, Evangelista Torricelli invented the barometer to measure air pressure. Torricelli’s work has been advanced to create new thermostatic technology we continue to use today.