Outstanding loans for above creditors:	22,000
V.A.A. Adinarayana Chetti	5,000
V.A.V.S. Venkatachalam Chetti	5,000
K.R. Venkatarama Aiyar	15,000
B.K. Ramaier	30,000

From this statement, it is amply clear that some of SSNCo's directors continued to invest in a tottering concern and did not lay first claim to any new infusion of funds.

Gillman speculated that a good part of the forthcoming loan of Rs 1 lakh would go to service the above debts and for repairs. Therefore, he contended that the company would be left with little to resume the regular running of the steamers.

The substantial loan advanced by the Mandayam brothers notwithstanding, S.D. Krishna Aiyangar was constantly on the move, trying to raise more funds, often with little or no success. In April, after meeting S.N. Thirumalachari in Madras, he went to Thanjavur; on his return to Tuticorin he went to Tiruchirappalli only to proceed to Madras after returning to Tuticorin; he was in Madurai again before proceeding to Madras. With such hectic travelling, he certainly kept the police shadowing him on their toes.[28]

K.R. Venkatarama Aiyar—who, as we saw above, had already advanced Rs 15,000 to the company—went to Denkanikottai in January to raise money from a Nattukkottai Chettiar.[29] Soon he was in Madras City in March on a similar drive.[30] Such was his Swadeshi fervour that even the police were impressed: 'K.R. Venkatarama Aiyar and certain others have for some time past been doing all in their power to raise the money and keep the company going.'[31]
