J.C. Molony, Ashe's successor. Those present on the occasion included S.V. Nallaperumal Pillai, Kaithan Villavarayar, J.L. Motha and Anthony Savarimuthu Rodriguez—names we encountered at various places in this story.[8]

Ironically, while there is nothing at Tuticorin to commemorate SSNCo or the protest violence of 1908, the Ashe Memorial stands as the only reminder of the glorious Swadeshi years.

Even attempts to trace the location of SSNCo's registered office on Great Cotton Road have not yielded results. Only two share certificates of the thousands that the company issued have survived: No. 11799, issued to S. Saminatha Mudaliar, Sirkazhi on 26 August 1907 and No. 20662 issued to S. Nagalingam Pillay of Thadalankovil, Sirkazhi on 10 November 1907 (Figure 23).[9]
