[1] Annual report of SSNCo (1907–08), MPAI, 1908, 1434(a).

[2] Kumar, ed., Cambridge Economic History of India, vol. 2, p. 574.

[3] Mehta, Indian Shipping, pp. 41–43.

[4] Sarkar, Swadeshi Movement in Bengal, pp. 109–110. Rabindranath Tagore recalls his brother's shipping venture with wry humour in My Reminiscences (London: Macmillan, 1917), pp. 255–57.

[5] 'Indian Steamship Companies', Indian Review, October 1908. This was based on a feature published in Dawn and Dawn Society's Magazine, August 1908.

[6] 'Indian Steamship Companies', Indian Review, October 1908.

[7] Sarkar, Swadeshi Movement in Bengal, p. 133.

[8] B. Adhimurthy Aiyar, writing from Nagapattinam, in Swadesamitran, 25-4-1906.

[9] Swadesamitran, 25-9-1906.

[10] Swadesamitran, 11-4-1906, editorial.

[11] The Hindu, 26-11-1908. 'The Problem of Regaining Seapower in South India', Modern Review, May 1909 provides a more elaborate critique of the venture.

[12] MPAI, 1910, paras 2040 and 2122.

[13] Oral evidence of A.V. Joseph, IMMC, evidence volume, p. 552.

[14] See for instance the initial prospectus signed by VOC in August 1906 and his letter to Swadesamitran, 24-9-1906.

[15] The Hindu, 26-6-1906.

[16] India (1-9-1906) reported—obviously wrongly—that he took 8,000 of the 10,000 shares!

[17] This closely printed two-page pamphlet was republished with a few minor tweaks in Vivekabhanu, 5 (8–11), August–November 1906 (a bumper issue consisting of four numbers) once again in VOC's name and was dated 4-10-1906.

[18] A reference to the Town Hall Meeting of Calcutta when the first resolution on the boycott of foreign goods and the encouragement of indigenous production was passed.

[19] India, 13-6-1908.