US banks. This angered foreign banks and their regulators for the same efficiency reason that the US argued with us—that it amounts to ring-fencing capital and depriving them of the flexibility to move it around as per need. The US authorities did not budge, evidently putting self-interest ahead of all else, inconsistency be damned.

A lesson in diplomacy for me at the end of my career!