Table 7.3 Off- the-Job-Training Programme for Cooks

Time	Subject matter	Method of instruction
9.00 am to 9.45 am	Hotel's history Present organization Objectives Personnel policies	Lecture Discussion Film show
9.45 am to 10.30 am	Kitchen equipment Cleanliness Safety and maintenance	Demonstration Discussion
10.30 am to 11.00 am	Hygiene	Films Discussions
11.00 am to 11.15 am	Tea break
11.15 am to 12 noon	Principles of cookery Grilling	Demonstration Discussion
12 noon to 1.00 pm	Portioning Preparation Presentation	Demonstration Practical
1.00 pm to 2.00 pm	Lunch break
2.00 pm to 4.00 pm	Practical cookery	Practical presentation
4.00 pm to 4.15 pm	Coffee break
4.15 pm to 5.00 pm	Costing Portion control	Talk Discussion
5.00 pm to 6.00 pm	Cleaning up

iii. Experimental methods

The objective of this method is to help an individual understand oneself and the dynamics of human relationship in a work situation including his managerial style. The two methods under this are sensitivity training and transactional analysis.

According to the purpose of training and level of participants the most desired method can be chosen to train the employees.

7.2.2 Motivation

A good management will always try to motivate employees and provide a suitable work atmosphere. The productivity of food service operation is directly related to the motivation of the employees.

Motivation is derived from the word 'motive'. Motive is defined as an inner state of individuals' mind that activates and directs the behaviour. Motivation refers to

FSM_Chapter 07.indd 150 1/13/2020 10:15:47 AM