provide motives to people, inorder to make them work for the organisation.

8.2 Meaning of Motivation

Motivation is derived from the word 'motive' which means moving into action. Motivation is the set of forces within a person that affect the direction, intensity and continuous existence of voluntary behaviour.

Motivation is a general term applying to the entire class of drives, desires, needs, wishes and similar forces. Motivation is the process of channeling a person's inner drives, so that he works to accomplish the goals of organisation.

Figure 8.1 Meaning of Motivation

Motivation is the process that account for an individual's intensity, direction and persistence of effort towards attaining the goal. While general motivation is concerned with effort towards any goal, organisational goals are narrowed down to focus in order to reflect our singular interest in work-related behaviour. Motivated individuals stay with a task for a long period inorder to achieve their goal. Motivation in management refers to the ways in which managers promote productivity of their employees.

The process of motivation is represented as:

1. Need:

   Motivation process starts from needs or expectation . If employees has no need or expectation they cannot be motivated. Employees run to address or to solve the need or expectation. Need or expectation is a very important process of motivation. Manager of the business organisation must pay proper consideration towards needs and expectation of the employees. Food is a relevant example of it.

2. Drive / Action:

   Drive is action oriented. After developing an expectation, people seek a job. The action is needed to address the need or expectation. Without action, employees cannot solve the food problems. Thus, when need occurs the people move for its implementation.

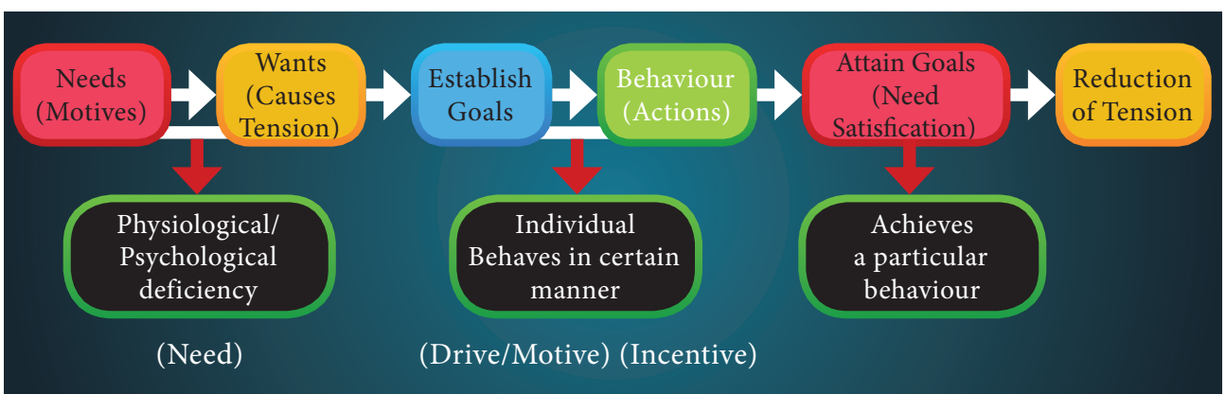

Figure 8.2 Process of Motivation

XII OSS_English version CHAPTER 08.indd 103 1/7/2020 6:07:50 PM