2. Identification of strategy to fulfill the need: After identification of various needs of a person, the next step is to find out the strategy through which it can be fulfilled.
3. Action – Fulfillment of the need: Need fulfillment depends mainly on the credentials and performance of the employee.
4. Identification of new / unfulfilled need : when one need is fulfilled, another will appear in its place. It has to be identified for fulfillment, since motivation is a continuous process.
5. Best attainment of common objectives : Accomplishment of need in turn will lead to the best attainment of common objectives i.e organisational objectives.

8.6 Merits of Motivation

Merits of motivation can be described in the following manner.

1. Motivation is the soul of managerial process: If motivation is removed from the managerial process it becomes meaningless. The higher is the motivation, the higher would be the performance; the lower is the motivation, lesser would be the performance.
2. Best utilization of resources: Motivated employeers make the best utilization of all resources leading cost minimization and profit maximization.
3. Best attainment of common objectives: Motivation not only facilitates the attainment of objectives, it also leads to their best realization – in terms of time spent and efforts involved.
4. Stability of work force: The best asset of an organization is stable work force. Motivation directlyand indirectly results in the stability of work force; necessiating only the minimum inevitable labour – turnover.
5. Morale and job satisfaction: A persistent state of high motivation builds up the morale (i.e a favorable attitude towards work) of employees. Such employees derive a lot of job – satisfaction which makes them happy.
6. Co-ordination facilitated: Motivated employees develop a better understanding of one another; by appreciating their mutual problems and resolving their differences in an amicable manner. Hence Motivation facilitates co-ordination.
7. Reduced needs for supervision: Motivated employees are self starters. The reduced need for supervision requires less number of managers – leading to reduction in managerial cost. It also widens span of control.

8.7 Types of Motivation

Motivation can be classified as follows:

I. Classification on the basis of Reward:

1. Financial: Financial incentives are the monetary benefits provided to an employee in the form of higher pay, bonus, commission etc.
2. Non financial: Non-financial incentives are the non-monetary benefits such as greater decision-making authority, better designation etc.
