1.7 Distinction between Administration and Management

Administration and management may seen the same but actually there is some difference. In our daily life we use these two terms interchangeably.

The administration is defined as a systematic process of administering the management of a business organisation (i.e) non – profit organisation. It is a broad term and involves planning, decision-making, organising and forecasting functions of the higher level of the enterprise.

Management is an act of managing people and their work to attain the organisational goals. The functions of management are planning, organising, staffing, directing, controlling.

Difference between Administration and Management are tabulated as follows:

Administration	Management
Administration is concerned with formulation of broad objectives, plans and polices.	Management is an art of getting things done through others by directing their efforts towards achievement of predetermined goals.
Administration is a decision making function.	Management is an executive function.
Administration decides what has to be done and when it has to be done.	Management decides who should do it and how.
Administration is thinking function because plans and policies are determined.	Management is doing function because manager get work done through others.
It is a top level function.	Middle and lower level function.
It is applicable to non-profit making organisation.	It is applicable to profit making organisation.

1.8 Functions of Management

Different experts have classified functions of management in different manner

According to George and Jerry, "There are four fundamental functions of management, (i.e.) Planning, Organising, Actuating and Controlling".

According to Henry Fayol, "To manage is to forecast and plan, to organise, to command and to control".
