of roles is basically the managerial function of organising.

Organising is:

i. Identification and classification of required activities.

ii. Grouping of activities necessary to attain objectives

iii. Assignment of each grouping to a manager with the authority (delegation) necessary to supervise it, and

iv. Provision for coordination horizontally (same organisation) and vertically (headquarters and departments) in the organisation structure.

3. Staffing

Staffing involves the process of filling positions in the organisation structure. The staffing function relates to the recruitment, selection, training, promotion and transfer of employees at all levels of management. The staffing function is different from other functions because it deals only with people.

4. Directing

Direction is process by which the employees are guided to contribute towards organisational objectives. The term directing refers to that the managerial function which initiates organised action. Formulating the policies and plans which will be useful if it is converted into action. According to Earnest Dale, "Direction is telling people what to do and seeing that they do it to their abilities. It includes making assignments, corresponding procedures, seeing that mistakes are corrected, providing on the job instructions and of course, issuing orders". It includes the following sub function. 1. Motivation 2. Leadership 3. Supervision 4. Communication and 5. Coordination.

5. Controlling

Controlling is an important element in the management process. Controlling involves setting standards measuring the performance comparing the actual with the standards and find out the deviations and taking corrective actions. Hence business enterprises can accomplish the goals only by establishing a proper control system. Control activities generally relate to the measurement and achievement. Each measures shows whether plans are working out or not.

Peter Drucker first used the term "management by objectives" in his 1954 book "The Practice of Management". While the basic ideas of MBO were not original to Drucker, they pulled from other management practices to create a complete "system". The ideas draws on the many ideas presented in Mary Parker Follett's 1926 essay, "The Giving of Orders".
