by virtue of certain special skills that he possesses. Such a leader always thinks of the task he has undertaken and spends most of his time finding out ways and means of doing it better.

Advantages:

- The presence of an expert or a functional leader is beneficial to the followers and the organisation.
- As the functional leader is a specialist in a particular field of activity, the subordinates can certainly enrich their job knowledge and skill, provided they are as committed and sincere as their leader is.

Disadvantages:

- The functional leader concentrates on his work only. An efficient subordinate can only work with him.
- Functional leader cannot go down to the level of an average worker and offer any help.

E. Institutional Leader:

An Institutional leader is one who has become a leader by virtue of his official position in the organisational hierarchy. For Ex: A person appointed as a general manager of the company. An institutional leader may not provide expert guidance to his followers. But he has to secure performance from them.

Advantages:

- He has official authority to act.
- He can demand performance from subordinates irrespective of his own credentials and the subordinates are officially answerable to him.

Disadvantages:

- As the institutional leader may not be an expert in his field of activity, he will not be in a position to offer proper guidance to his followers.
- Although the leader has the official right to demand performance from his followers, he may not have the moral right, as his own credentials are less.

F. Paternalistic Leader:

A Paternalistic leader takes care of his followers in the way the head of the family takes care of the family members. He is mainly concerned with the well being of his followers and is always ready to protect them. He may provide them with all the physical amenities needed. But he will not be able to guide them to perform the job well. Thus, the paternalistic leader is able to be sociable but is not able to offer intellectual help.

Advantages:

- He assumes a paternal role to protect his followers.
- He is always ready to provide the necessary physical amenities to the subordinates.

Disadvantages:

- He is not in a position to offer intellectual help to his followers.
- Those followers, who are capable and achievement-oriented, feel frustrated as the leader is not able to guide them to enrich their job knowledge and skill.

G. Charismatic Leader:

Charismatic leadership is basically the method of encouraging particular behaviors in others by way of effective
