Indians in the arts and sciences, including Rabindranath Tagore and CV Raman, and helped fund both Aligarh Muslim University and Banaras Hindu University. He was a key member of and fundraiser for the Harijan Sevak Sangh, an organization founded by Gandhi in 1932 to work for the upliftment of ‘untouchables’. Birla’s philanthropy continued in the decades after Independence, with donations being made to hospitals, temples, museums and even towards the building of the first planetarium in the country in Calcutta.

Today, Birla’s birthplace of Pilani is best known as the location of the prestigious Birla Institute of Technology and Science. Founded in 1964, it is still one of India’s premier educational institutions and is known for its emphasis on practical training and holistic education.
