

Jamnalal was married off at the age of twelve to the eight-year-old Jankidevi, who grew up to become a Gandhian in her own right. She spoke out against purdah and untouchability, and worked with other Gandhians in the campaigns they undertook after Independence. She was awarded a Padma Vibhushan in 1956 for her work.

AMBALAL SARABHAI

1890–1967

Ambalal Sarabhai was born into a wealthy Gujarati merchant family based in Ahmedabad. He was one of Gandhi's earliest and most ardent supporters. Besides making large financial contributions, the Sarabhais were enthusiastic participants in India's nationalist movement. Their home in Ahmedabad was a meeting place for India's nationalist and intellectual elite, including the Nehrus, Vallabhbhai Patel and Rabindranath Tagore.
