So he launched a programme of progressive social change, and encouraged people to lead simpler lives and to learn to create useful things with their hands. He promoted good sanitation, led campaigns against caste- and gender-based discriminatory practices, and tried to get India's many religious and social groups to work together. From industrialists and farmers to princesses and poets, the ideas he articulated brought him thousands of devoted followers.

SATYAGRAHA OR 'TRUTH FORCE'

Gandhi first came up with and practised the idea of satyagraha, a way of protesting without violence and living the truth of one's beliefs, in South Africa. This idea would eventually change the course of the Indian independence movement.

"AFTER I AM GONE, NO SINGLE PERSON WILL BE ABLE COMPLETELY TO REPRESENT ME…BUT A LITTLE BIT OF ME WILL LIVE IN MANY OF YOU."
