Threshold, her first volume of poetry, was published in 1905, and received glowing reviews, both in India and abroad. She would go on to publish two more during her lifetime. She wrote in English, but the subjects she wrote about and the way she expressed herself remained distinctly Indian.

In 1930, soon after Gandhi was arrested for making salt on the beach at Dandi, Sarojini led a group of volunteers to raid the Dharasana Salt Works, as a way of protesting the unfair British law that prevented Indians from making their own salt. The protesters were met with violence by the police but did not retaliate. Sarojini herself was arrested and sent to jail; this was one of several jail terms she served during the nationalist movement.
