You have already read briefly about the social and religious reformers of the nineteenth century, as well as women who founded women's rights organizations in colonial India and anti-caste activists who questioned and resisted the practices that had denied them human rights for centuries.

Many others have followed in their wake, often working in hostile conditions, facing social ostracism, and struggling with a lack of resources in the course of their work. This section features a few of them: social activists and reformers whose work has brought succour to the many millions in distress in India.

MURLIDHAR DEVIDAS 'BABA' AMTE

1914–2008

