economically when it also progressed socially. Being part of the Constituent Assembly thus afforded him an important opportunity to lay the foundation for this social progress: he helped frame a constitution that would grant equal rights to all of India's citizens, protect the marginalized and work towards social justice. As Chairman of the Drafting Committee, he took on the arduous task of putting the Constitution together. In this role, he had to explain the committee's views, and defend how and why a sentence or a clause was written in a certain way.

"INDEPENDENCE IS NO DOUBT A MATTER OF JOY. BUT LET US NOT FORGET THAT THIS INDEPENDENCE HAS THROWN ON US GREAT RESPONSIBILITIES. BY INDEPENDENCE, WE HAVE LOST THE EXCUSE OF BLAMING THE BRITISH FOR ANYTHING GOING WRONG. IF HEREAFTER THINGS GO WRONG, WE WILL HAVE NOBODY TO BLAME EXCEPT OURSELVES."
