LOVING OUR NEIGHBOURS AS OURSELVES AND DOING TO ALL MEN AS WE WOULD HAVE THEM TO US, IN BEING GENTLE, MERCIFUL AND FORGIVING, IN NEVER BOASTING BUT ALWAYS HUMBLY TRYING TO DO RIGHT IN EVERYTHING."

Fighting for equality

Before and during her involvement with the Congress, Kaur dedicated time and effort towards other causes, especially women's rights. She was a member (and later president) of the All India Women's Conference, and campaigned against child marriage and polygamy. She also lobbied for women to have access to education and the right to vote. As a member of the Constituent Assembly, she made significant contributions to the debates on fundamental rights and minority rights. Both Kaur and her fellow champion of women's rights, Hansa Mehta, were against reservations for women and voiced support for a secular uniform civil code, which they felt would eliminate discriminatory practices in the laws of India's many religious communities.

Amrit Kaur became a close associate of Gandhi's, and served as his secretary for sixteen years. She felt particularly strongly about his
