Governor-General of India, William Pitt.[36] Raja Rammohun Roy was known as a ‘Hindoo social reformer’ and as one of the founders of the Brahmo Sabha. The following is a reproduction of Roy’s letter to Pitt, which reflected his views on indigenous education and his fervent appeal for European education:

> Sir,
>
> I beg leave to send you the accompanying address and shall feel obliged if you will have the goodness to lay it before the Right Hon’ble the Governor-General in Council.

> His Excellency the Right Hon’ble William Pitt, Lord Amherst.
>
> My Lord,
>
> Humbly reluctant as the natives of India are to obtrude upon the notice of Government the sentiments they entertain on any public measure, there are circumstances when silence would be carrying this respectful feeling to culpable excess.
>
> The present Rulers of India, coming from a distance of many thousand miles to govern a people whose language, literature, manners, customs, and ideas are almost entirely new and strange to them, cannot easily become so intimately acquainted with their real circumstances, as the natives of the country are themselves. We should therefore be guilty of a gross dereliction of duty to ourselves, and afford our Rulers just ground of complaint at our apathy, did we omit on occasions of importance like the present to supply them with such accurate information as might enable them to devise and adopt measures calculated to be beneficial to the country, and thus second by our local knowledge and experience their declared benevolent intentions for its improvement.
>
> The establishment of a new Sangscrit School in Calcutta evinces the laudable desire of Government to improve the Natives of India by Education—a blessing for which they must ever be grateful; and every
