Attention Skills

The sender needs to pay attention to what he or she is trying to communicate, and choose the best words and body language to communicate with. The receiver needs to pay attention to what is being communicated by listening and watching. Attention is primarily governed by the type of attitude sender or receiver has towards each other during communication.

Effective communication helps us to:
Anticipate problems, decisions, co-ordinate, work flow, supervise others, develop relationship and promote products a services.

Rapport Building

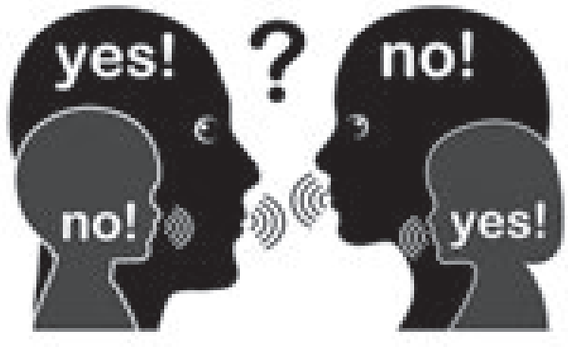
Rapport building is important in both our professional and personal lives

- Use nonthreatening and 'safe topics' for initial small talk.
- Listen to what the other person is saying and look for shared experiences or circumstances this will give you more to talk about in the initial stages of communication.
- Try to inject an element of humour.
- Be conscious of your body language and other nonverbal signals you are sending.
- Show some empathy.

Empathy Skills

Empathy skills are very important in good communication. Empathy is the ability to see the world as another person, and to share and understand another person's feeling, need, concern, and/or emotional state.

10.8.2 Guidelines for Effective Communication



1. Clarity of purpose

- In the first place we must make a careful analysis of what exactly we wish to communicate.
- But any effort made in this direction proves to be fruitful.
- As George Berneard shaw says, "The major mistake in communication is to believe that it happens."

2. Shared activity

- Let us forget that effective communication is the responsibility of all persons in the organisations.
- They may be at any level managerial or non-managerial. They are all working towards a common goal.

3. Common set of Symbols

- The encoding and decoding of the message should be done with symbols that are familiar to the sender and the receiver.
