- It is an immutable condition of communication that the code or set of symbols be mutually understood.

4. Focus the needs of the receiver

- Whenever we communicate we must keep in mind the needs of the receivers and the message / information.
- It should be our endeavour to see that whatever we communicate should be of value to the receiver, both in the short run and in the distant future.
- Our awareness of the needs of the receiver will make him more receptive.

5. Use Feedback

- Use Feedback, exhorts Stephen Robbins, a renowned authority on organisational behaviour. As the model of the communication process given in the preceding chapter shows, communication is complete only when the message is understood by the receiver.
- We can never know whether communication / message is understood unless the sender gets feedback.
- Many communication problems arise because of misunderstandings and inaccuracies.

6. Active Listening

- Active or 'participative' listening is as important as any other element in the process of communication.
- It shows, again, that communication is a joint responsibility of both the sender and the receiver.

7. Controlling Emotions

- Emotions play an important role in interpersonal relationships between superiors, subordinates and colleagues in an organisation.
- It should therefore, be an important aim of communication to create an environment in which people are motivated to work toward the desired goals of the enterprise while they achieve their personal goals.

8. Politeness

- This leads us to the tone of voice aspect of communication.
- Everybody knows that politeness pays and it is reflected so very 'loudly' both in words and actions.

9. Eliminate noise

- Every possible effort must be made to eliminate the element of noise that distorts communication at the transmission stage.
- It becomes especially important in the wake of modern technological advancement.
- Anything going wrong with the equipment or any disturbance in the transmission line is bound to defeat the very purpose of communication.

10. Clarify Assumptions

- No effective communication can be based on assumptions.
- The sender of the message must first clarify his assumptions and then go ahead with proper encoding of the message.
